

JORI MUNDY

Jori currently serves as a Director with the Texas Health and Human Services Commission. She is responsible for inspiring and developing a highly engaged team to achieve program outcomes. In addition, she is charged with finding opportunities to maximize program income, improve processes through automation and program related provider enrollment. Even with the myriad of duties, the common denominator remains with helping and inspiring people.

She is a past Board member of the Executive Women in Texas Government Organization. She is a 2019 graduate of the prestigious National Leadership America program. She is a four-time first place award winning International speech contest winner. She holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Indiana University and a Master of Public Affairs from the Indiana University School of Public and Environmental Affairs - one of the top public universities in the country. In 2020 she was featured in The Evolving Woman e-magazine. She has spoken on a variety of platforms, for varying organizations to both large and small audiences.

Jori has gone where her passion and conviction has led her including speaking to women in federal prisons, coordinating and facilitating an eight-week public speaking program developing young public speakers for the Girl Scouts, uplifting the general public during the global pandemic, inspiring colleagues during times of difficulty, presenting prestigious awards to award recipients, and the list goes on. She has spoken on a variety of platforms, for varying organizations to both large and small audiences.

Outside of work, she loves to travel and spend time with family. She is an active member of several non-profit organizations as well as live and promote a healthy lifestyle.
